

Where does adjustment land?

A. Structural balance alone

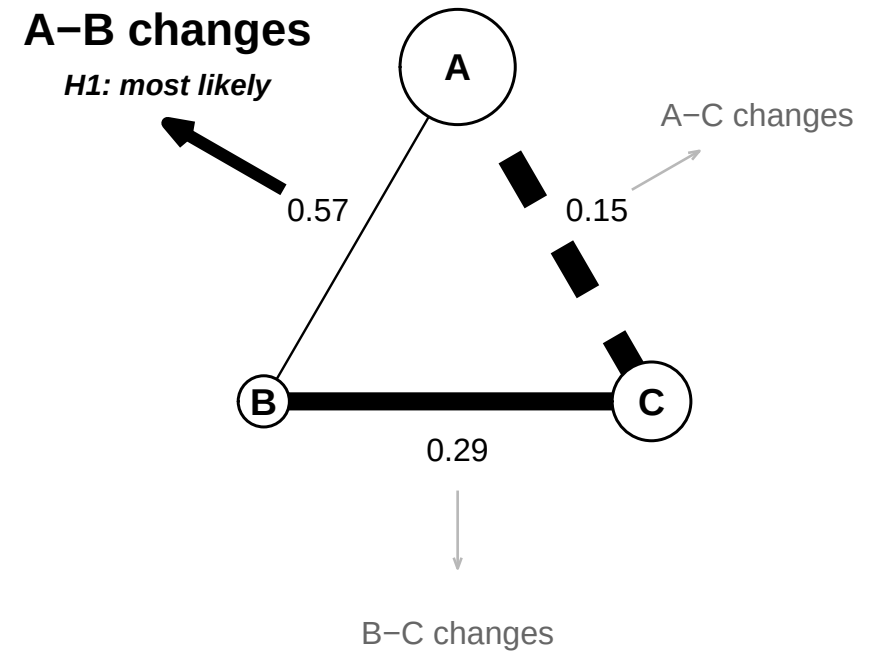

Creates pressure to adjust, not where adjustment lands

B. Asymmetric dependence added

More asymmetric relationships are more likely to absorb the adjustment

Thinner ties are more asymmetric, and more likely to absorb the reorientation

Structural imbalance creates the choice; dependence asymmetry allocates it.